SO YOU WANT TO KNOW ABOUT...

Spring 2021 Course Types
Asynchronous courses do not meet at specific times, but deadlines occur throughout the term. They provide increased flexibility and are particularly suited for self-disciplined students with unpredictable schedules that make regular attendance more difficult.

When registering, look for “ONL” under the Time column and “ONLINE” under the Location column.
Synchronous courses have some regularly-scheduled meetings but occur entirely online through Zoom or a similar platform. They are particularly suited for students who prefer the real-time interaction that Zoom allows, and they can facilitate activities that are infeasible in socially distanced classrooms.

When registering, look for “Synchronized Online Component” under the Attribute column, as well as days and times listed.
Hybrid

courses meet in-person at least some of the time but also include asynchronous and/or synchronous sessions. The exact format differs from course to course, and social distancing is maintained when in-person. They are particularly well-suited for students who prefer at least some time in a face-to-face learning environment.

When registering, look for days and times listed along with a classroom under the Location column.
Early registration begins on Thursday, November 5th and continues by assigned entry date for currently enrolled students. To find out your assigned time for Registration visit the Academic Services Tab on MyCharleston. And for a calendar of entry times, visit https://registrar.cofc.edu/calendars
